The area is located south of the Colorado River in the Colorado Plateau region and is dominated by the Hooper Butte Mountains and the Stansbury Mountains. It is bordered by the Alamo-Purgatory Wilderness to the west and north, and the Entrada-Wasatch Wildland to the east. History The area was first identified for protection in 1968 as the Southwest Wasatch Primitive Area. In 1978 it was expanded to become the Majestic Mountain Primitive Area. A proposal to extend the wilderness by went before the United States Congress in April 1994, but was defeated by a unanimous voice vote of the House of Representatives and Senate.
